Who Will Ride Herod? Trentbridge
Lame; Maiden's Stakes Prospects;
Some Australians To Watch

(BY "MORNING DEW")

With the Annual Race Meeting only three days off, it is not yet certain who will ride the Derby favourite, Herod. The original report that Mr. Fote Hunt will be coming down for the "Sassoon" stable has proved to be incorrect. There was some talk last week that Mr. V. V. Needs would be invited to ride Herod, but the latest gossip is that if the "Star" stable is not starting in the Derby, Mr. D. S. Li will be offered the mount. Herod has a very fine chance of winning the race, and it will be interesting to see under which jockey he will go to the post.

Bad Luck

I am sure readers will regret to hear that Mrs. Pearce's Trentbridge will be unable to face the starter at the Annual Meeting. The pony developed leg trouble a fortnight ago and instead of improving, has definitely gone the other way. Trentbridge is the only pony capable of giving Liberty Bay a close race. In his absence, the Dunbar Stable, with Liberty Bay and Diana Bay, should be able to pick and choose races for the "open" class. Soldier of Britain will have little or no opposition in the China Stakes in the absence of Trentbridge, as Diana Bay, I hear will be going out in the last race on Saturday.

"Draw" To-morrow

While on the subject of Saturday's programme, readers will be glad to hear that the draw for the two sections of Wong Nei Chong Stakes and the Sydney Maidens will take place to-morrow evening at 5 p.m. instead of on Friday. This move by the stewards, I am sure, has the approval of everyone since it enables racegoers to have an extra twenty-four hours to weigh up the chances.

Derby Sweep Going Well

Have you bought a ticket in the $1 Derby Sweep? At the Secretaries' Office yesterday, the place was packed with people trying to participate in the sweep. On Monday 7,000 tickets were sold and yesterday a further 8,000 were disposed of. To date 115,000 chances have been taken up, and it is likely that by Saturday the 150,000 mark will be reached, in which case the first prize will be the very welcome sum of $63,000. Have you got your ticket?

Victoria Hall

I do not propose to discuss the chances of the two Wong Nei Chong races until I have seen the draw. The Maiden Stakes should provide a good race as all the "cracks" are going out either in the Trial Plate or the Racing Stakes. Mr. Ho Kom Tong's Victoria Hall is moving very nicely just now and is not a bad thing at all for the Maidens. The "Dynasty" stable has three or four good griffins and whatever they send out will not be far away. In all probability King's Jubilee will be sent there. Mistake Bay is going in the Trials, and if Portiac Bay is sent out in the sprint, he will not worry the favourites. A couple of very good sprinters are Iron Cross and Bonny Dundee and punters can do worse than back one of these. If Rose Queen goes out here, she will be dangerous!

Record Likely

There should be a rattling good race, if, by any co-incidence, Derby Day and Streamline are drawn in the same section of the Sydney Maidens! I am sure there are as many supporters for the one as there are for the other. Derby Day has been responsible for a very nice mile gallop recently and, on paper, looks slightly the better candidate. Got That and The Bean Goose are two others who will not be far away, whichever section they are drawn in, and don't forget this, Southern Cross is a first-rater who will do well even if he falls in the Maidens. The Macri is a name you might keep under your hat, as he has the makings of a good pony and appears to be exceptionally fit at the moment.

Double Chance The Best

I think the Valleys will draw a big field, but no matter how many starters there are, Double Chance is sure to command a big following. This pony has been described as a second, Racing Boy, and whether this description is justified or not, events alone will prove. Mr. Needs will be riding Lucky Strike, another good candidate, but the pony, I am afraid, is a bit moody, and if he wants to run, he will get very near. The Cheetah, Felbridge Wadebridge, Gold Plover, Latitat, Invincible Knight and Valley View are a few of the others worth considering.

The Trial Plate

If Herod goes out in the Trial Plate, he will find good company in Mistake Bay, Portiac, Soldier of Victory, Harvest View and Estover. The winner of this race will probably be the winner of the Derby. Pacific Hall is going out in the Hopeful Stakes. I hear Herod and Mistake Bay will be sure to put up a great race, but I can't help feeling that the grey is a bit too good for the Dunbar candidate. Harvest View is not altogether out of it and the same can be said of Foxbridge and Estover.

Watch Gold Coin

I mentioned that Pacific Hall will be going out in the Hopeful Stakes. He will find here one very good rival in Mr. Li Tse Fong's Gold Coin, a pony which has been doing good steady work for the past month. Gold Coin seems to like the racing business and although I would not go so far as to say he will win the Derby, I think I can safely say that he will catch the judge's eye during the meeting, especially when the seven pounds penalty begins to operate against those who have won earlier. Night View will probably start here and if Rose Queen does not go out in the Maiden, she will in all probability be saddled for the Hopeful Stakes, so that it can be seen that Pacific Hall will have plenty of sound company.

The "Old Uns"

So far as the old ponies are concerned, Liberty Bay looks a certainty for the Foochow Cup, Diana Bay for the New Stakes Plate and Soldier of Britain for the China Stakes. In the absence of Trentbridge, probably King's Warden will carry the Dynasty colours in the five furlongs, but good as this pony is, he is no match for the "Soldier."

Soldier of Honour

There has been quite a lot of speculation as to whether Soldier of Honour will go to the post. I am sure no one can say. There is no doubt that this candidate is in a class by himself, but he has not had the necessary preparation. If kept over, he is almost a "clinch" for next year. I started this year, he may or may not do well, since he has improved remarkably during the past week. The Derby, though, is quite a long race, and it seems impossible that a pony, not thoroughly prepared, can get away with it. The selections together with a review of the first day's prospects will appear in the Daily Press on Saturday morning.

AN AIR LINER FOR 70 PASSENGERS

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, Jan. 23. An air liner to carry more than 70 passengers, besides its crew, is under construction for Imperial Airways. When it has passed its type and performance tests others of the type will be ordered.

This development and the launching of the new French giant flying boat indicate a line of development in air rivalry distinct from the speed factor and of no less importance. Britain is preparing to operate bigger air liners than any yet in service.

The extent of the machine's carrying capacity may be more readily grasped when it is stated that a London tramcar carries 68 passengers.

Details are not available, and probably the huge machine will not be ready for trial flights for about 18 months. Needless to say, construction on such a vessel is not begun before technical certainty justifies it, and great care has to be taken to ensure that the latest scientific knowledge is embodied. Otherwise a machine becomes obsolete in a year or two—a very unsatisfactory position for craft which should be in regular service for six or seven years.

The old weight limit for land aeroplanes has, of course, been far surpassed, and big machines, over 30 tons in weight, are no longer held to be impracticable since new standards of reliability have been achieved with the modern four-engined and six-engined craft.

Justifying The Cost
It is a fact of great significance that the operators of the leading countries are now able to go to work in the certainty that in the course of the next three or four years air passenger traffic will be heavy enough to justify the construction, at great cost, of big machines which would entail big operational loss if their cabins were not occupied on an average to at least 60 per cent. of their capacity.

The biggest air liners at present range from about eight to 24 tons, fully loaded.

Heracles type (British)..... 13 2,200 h.p. 32
Junkers G 38 (German)..... 24 3,200 h.p. 34

Glenn L. Martin (U.S.A.)..... 25 3,200 h.p. 48

The very big liners will not be the fastest, but a cruising speed of 140 m.p.h. and services operated, as they will be by night as well as by day, will secure on long-distance routes a big saving of time.

INSULTING THE PREMIER

(Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright).)

Paris, Feb. 11. The 44-year old industrialist, de la Roche Fouldre who on February 6 uttered insulting remarks against Premier Flandin when the latter attended the memorial service in Notre Dame Cathedral for the victims of last year's February riot, was sentenced on Monday to one year imprisonment. The verdict provoked loud protests among the spectators in the court. During the proceedings, accused repeatedly declared that he would not withdraw one word of his offensive statement.

As Flandin entered the Cathedral accused had shouted that the Premier's presence was an insult to the memory of the victims—Transocean Kuo Min.

Vienna, Feb. 11. Three hundred skiers met with accidents in the mountains in the immediate vicinity of the Austrian capital on Sunday, half of them being seriously injured, according to reports now to hand from the first-aid stations. This enormous figure which constitutes a record is primarily due to sheet ice having been formed into snow through the recent variations of the temperature, causing innumerable dangerous falls—Transocean Kuo Min.

"Whenever there is disfunction in the body, lack of minerals is probably a contributing factor."

The "South African Medical Record".

"I have no hesitation in stating that Kalzana is the most efficient mineral food I know of."

M.B., M.R.C.P.

Your Weakness may be a Deficiency Disease

A few typical symptoms of mineral deficiency are:

General Weakness
Tooth Decay
Nervous Irritability
Skin Troubles
Anæmia
Low Resistance to Colds & Infections
Feminine Complaints

Lack of certain minerals in the body, physicians have discovered, is responsible for many complaints—often of a totally differing character. Such diverse troubles as tooth-decay, general weakness, dizziness, nerve pain, may have their root in one and the same cause: mineral deficiency. Drugs only relieve the symptoms and make the condition worse in the end.

With Kalzana, however, you can relieve the actual cause of your complaint, because Kalzana makes good the lack of minerals in your body. Kalzana contains the vital elements needed by your system, combined in such a way that they are readily taken up by the body and quickly reach the weakened organs.

Kalzana, moreover, has a strengthening influence on the whole body. It soothes the nerves and gives new health and increased power of resistance. Lack of minerals is a very common cause of ill-health, but a course of Kalzana will soon put you right again.

Give Kalzana to the children also, especially during the time of teething and rapid growth when there is an increased demand for minerals in the child. Kalzana turns pale, listless children into buoyantly healthy youngsters.

Remember, Kalzana is not a drug but a mineral food and must do you good. Start a course to-day.

The opinion of leading Medical Papers:

"The Tung-Chi Medical Paper" writes:

"The regular administration of Kalzana in sufficient doses maintains normal blood alkalinity, replaces excessive loss of calcium from the tissues, markedly relieves many of the distressing symptoms of disease, and definitely assists the body to overcome the infection."

"The Medical Paper, 'The Practitioner,' writes:

"Kalzana acts efficiently in promoting the growth of strong bones and healthy teeth—in reducing blood pressure and stimulating the glands and blood-forming tissues. Kalzana is indicated in the diet of expectant and nursing mothers and of growing children, and in all conditions where a mineral food is required."

ONE NIGHT OF LOVE

What A Misnomer!

Before going to the preview of this film one thought one was going to see a sort of close up thriller. Instead one found as soon as the curtain went up that you were in for a first class original film. Casting around for a plot offering suitable opportunities for vocal talent, a variation of the Svengali-Tribby

At the moment of her first entrance in "Madame Butterfly" she loses her nerve and cannot sing, but suddenly recogidea was chosen. Miss Grace Moore as Mary, a beautiful would-be opera singer, renders excellent singing from her verandah in Milan, accompanied by musicians on various floors of the building. Mary is overheard performing in a cafe by a famous impresario and teacher who has sworn against falling in love again with any of his pupils. Mary is trained, makes her debut and is a great success. She plays at the Scala, in Vienna, opera house where nises the impresario in the promoter's box, who guides her safely through the performance, to gather her in his arms at the end. The singing of Miss Grace Moore in "Madame Butterfly" is excellent and the scene in the Japanese Garden is very beautiful indeed. It speaks a great deal for the technique of the "Talkie" apparatus to be able to render the human singing voice so marvellously. I thoroughly enjoyed the film, which is coming to the Queen's

THE TRUE LIFE STORY OF DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS

When the "cattle boat" docked in New York Harbour, Doug said goodbye to his shipmates. He had heard that Wall Street was another name for Easy Money. In Wall Street there was an austere brokerage firm called De Coppel & Doremus. The name of the firm appealed to young Fairbanks. He marched into the office, grinning. When the interview was over, the office manager had hired Shakespeare's worst enemy as an order man.

He is still remembered in that office, fondly but fearfully. He did his work well enough; and there are those who credit him with inventing scientific management.

"You see, it was this way," he explained. "For five days in a week I would say 'Quite so' to my assistant, no matter what he suggested. On Saturday I would dash into the manager's office, knit my brow and exclaim, 'What we need around here is—efficiency.' And once I urged the purchase of a time-clock."

His tumbling, boxing, leap-frogging, chair-jumping and other minor gaudies upset office routine to a certain extent; but in spite of them he was made head of the order department in a short time. It was an excellent job for so young a man. It was at this time that Fairbanks married Beth Sully, the mother of Doug Fairbanks Jr. Miss Sully was the daughter of Dan Sully, then known as "The Cotton King," one of the wealthiest men of that era. Doug was at once catapulted into a gay whirl of social activity, spending much time at the great Sully place on fashionable Narragansett Bay.

Friends and family sighed with relief. Surely now the young dynamo would settle down; he had an excellent job, a wife, a child. Most young men in his position would have been well content to "stay put." But Wall Street was a narrow thoroughfare—the world was full of wider roads, his gypsy feet longed to feel beneath them.

His next ventures were along various other of commerce. He sold soap, or he sold coal. However, he didn't sell much coal, and was called on the carpet in that connection. Only his ready wit kept him from being fired.

"What do you know about the coal business, anyway?" demanded the manager.

"Well," Doug replied quickly, "I know 1800 pounds make a ton."

He kept the job. He always managed to make fairly good money, and was never fired. When his vagabond heart tugged him to the other side of the fence, or to the other end of the world, he could always find something to do—in the theatre or out of it. But somehow all roads for him led eventually to the stage.

He went from the coal business into that of hardware manufacturing, but when he discovered that the head man of the great firm, after devoting most of his life to bolts, nuts, screws and hinges, drew only a paltry $10,000 a year, he decided hardware was not for him.

Perhaps the footlights were his best bet, after all. The next season found him playing in "Mrs. Jack" in support of Alice Fisher. But he got into an argument with some one in the company and deprived of a splendid lawyer.

He read law for three months in the offices of E. B. Hollander. Just at that time a wave of Japanese operetta swept the country like a drift of cherry blossoms, and Doug was off again. He must see the Far East without further delay. Besides, he had got hold of a patent electric switch with which he fully intended to amass a fortune abroad. But in London he met a friend from New York, forgot all about geisha girls and electric switches and returned home and to the stage, this time under the management of William A. Brady.

This was the beginning of a pleasant association which lasted on and off for seven years. That fall, Doug was to be found in his first and only musical show, "Fantasia," one of Julia Sanderson's triumphs—that is, he was to be found by such of his friends as knew he was in the chorus!

A few months later he received a telegram from Brady offering him a five-year contract. So surprised and skeptical was he that he wired Brady to discover whether the telegram was bona fide or just a hoax. Not long after, his name was in electric letters as the star of "Frenzied Finance." The play was a failure, but others followed quickly.

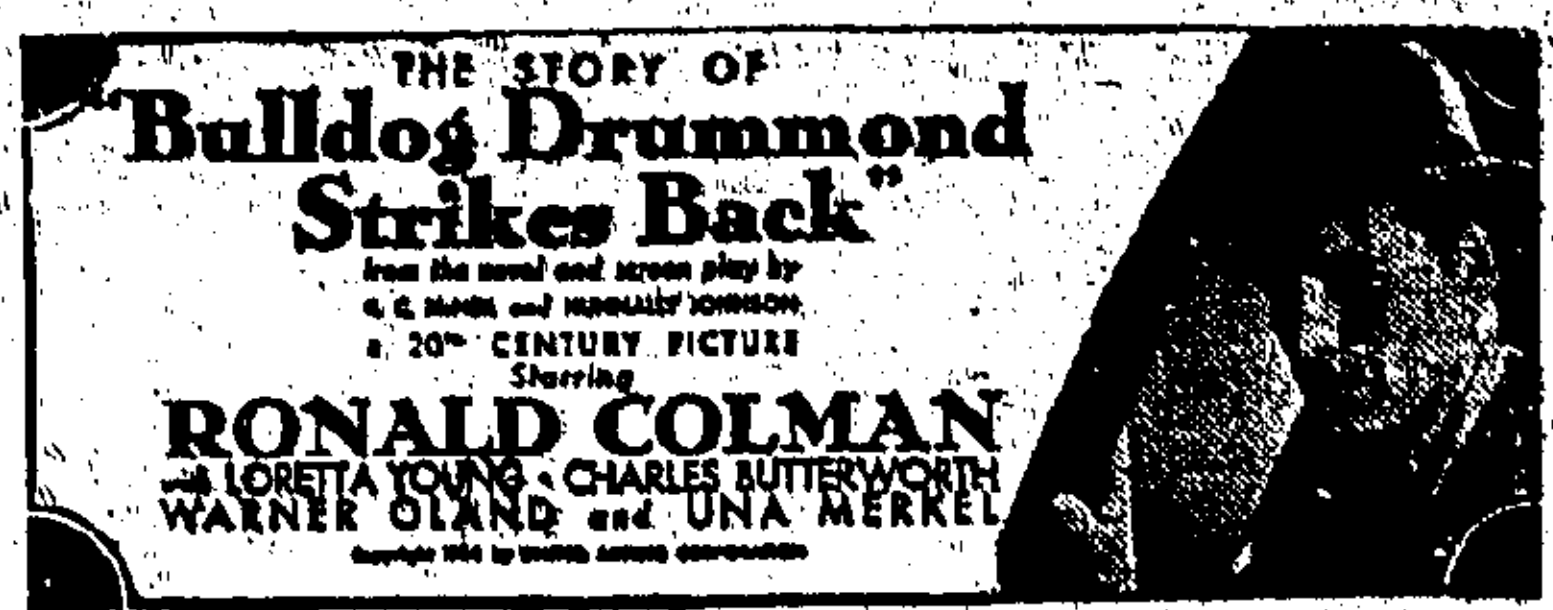

It seems strange to recall that few of the productions in which Doug became so popular in those days were sensational successes. Many of them ran from 12 to 15 weeks; almost none were smash hits. But under Brady's management the young actor skyrocketed rapidly. Brady is almost as much of a human dynamo as Fairbanks himself, and although the two were sometimes at swords' points, the great manager approved of Doug's tireless drive, his youthful enthusiasm.

"Some boy!" was Brady's tribute. "Put him in a death scene, and he'd find a way to break the furniture."

During this period Doug became almost an idol on Broadway. The Fairbanks smile became famous; critics and columnists mentioned it daily. He was one of the most popular members of the Lambs Club, and still keeps up his activities. He was always the ideal actor—a very Beau Brummel, all shining teeth and immaculate cuffs. He was known as "the best dressed actor on Broadway, on or off—meaning, in theatrical vernacular, on the stage or off it."

Athletics were, then as now an important part of his daily life. He excelled in many sports, and health was almost a fetish with him. Nor could he restrain his enthusiasm and activity on the stage. He was never known to enter a room or approach a stairway in the orthodox manner; he would invariably mount three steps at a time or scale the balustrade. His infectious exuberance brought into vogue a new type of comedy romance. And how they loved it, men and women alike! He was Francis Villot; Robin Hood—all the heroes of their dreams brought up-to-date.

But he was an elusive idol; Broadway lost him for long periods. He was always apt to turn up—or to turn up missing! (Continued next week)

CHAPTER II
"A body? What sort of a body?" said a new voice, and a distinguished-looking man of unmistakable Oriental race stepped through a door facing the group.

"Two minutes ago," said Drummond, "a body—the body of a man who died in great agony—was lying in that room."

"This is shocking," said the Oriental, "too shocking for me to ignore, sir. I am afraid I must insist on your looking again."

The party moved into the living room, and there, sitting at the piano, was a radiant, dark Oriental woman. Drummond, startled, approached her.

"Permit me," said the Oriental whom they had met at the door, "I am Prince Achmed of Shahi. This is my daughter, Lady Jane Sothorn."

"Drummond is my name, sir," Hugh Drummond said. "At least, you were not in the room before, else I'd most certainly have noticed you," said Drummond, smiling.

Drummond turned toward the divan. A man was lying there in a similar position to the corpse he had seen three minutes before. But the figure now moved. It was all very mysterious.

"My most humble apologies, sir, for mistaking you—for a corpse," said Drummond, smiling.

"My husband," said Lady Jane, "is dead. Obviously drunk, the man on the divan acknowledged the introduction."

"And now," said Prince Achmed, "you are quite satisfied that we are harboring no bodies—violently dead or otherwise?"

"If you follow my advice," interrupted the bobby, "you'll go home, sir."

"Thanks, officer. I always follow good advice," said Drummond. "And with that Drummond made a hasty exit from the house."

A few minutes later, however, he was back at the entrance of the house carefully inspecting the doorway for a cigarette butt he had tossed away on his first visit. He found the butt, which convinced him that he had not gone back to the wrong house the second time. As he straightened up, Drummond came face to face with Prince Achmed.

"If you place the slightest value on your life," said Achmed slowly, "I advise you to forget this whole incident."

In the meantime Algy had settled quietly with his bride in a luxurious suite in a London hotel.

"Oh, Algy, I'm the happiest woman in all London," sighed Gwen as she kissed him on the cheek. He looked a bit embarrassed as she started for the bedroom.

"I thought I—I'd change," said Gwen. "Probably a very good idea." But Algy was still nervous.

"Just one wee little moment, dear."

"It's all right—no hurry, you know," said Algy, embarrassed. The phone rang violently. It was Drummond.

"But, Algy," Algy had a pleading note in his voice. "I can't leave here now, I really can't. Not yet, anyway. What I mean to say, Hugh, is—well, here I am and here she is, too. Kind of puts me in a, well, you might call it a dilemma, don't you think?"

When Gwen returned to the room, a vision of loveliness in her silk and lace negligee, she found Algy with top coat and hat on.

"Oh, Algy! But Algy, you can't go now!"

"I must be getting along. I mean the truth is—no one has beating around the bush—must be getting along about my business. Well, au revoir. That's the French goodbye, remember? Au revoir means got to be—well, getting along."

As Algy departed, Gwen threw herself on the bed crying. "On my wedding night, revolt!"

The dutiful Algy made his way to find him in conversation with Inspector Nielson who (coupled the apartment) above him. Drummond was relating his experience at Prince Achmed's home. The inspector dismissed the whole thing as one of Drummond's dreams.

"I don't believe a word of it," said Nielson. "In the first place, your Prince Achmed is a distinguished visitor to England, not a criminal. In the second place, you are a hard-boiled young rascal who will probably next find an Egyptian mummy in your bath. And in the third place, I'm sleepy and I'm going to bed. Good night!" He slammed the door and stomped up the stairs to his apartment above.

"You believe me, don't you Algy?" said Drummond.

"Who? Me?" Algy's mind was not on the business at hand. He was thinking ruefully of Gwen. There was a knock on the door. Opening it, there stood the girl Drummond had met in the fog. Her eyes widened at the sight of him. With a little moan she averted and faded as Drummond grabbed her. He placed her on the divan to revive her.

"I wouldn't do that, if I were you," said Algy. "Gwen came to my door like that once and it was nearly September before I could get her out."

The girl opened her eyes and stared at Drummond in bewilderment. "Where is Inspector Nielson?"

"You'll doubtless find him safe in the arms of Morpheus," smiled Drummond.

"Please, be serious! They told me at his apartment he was here. I must find him! I've got to find him!"

"Matter of fact, he just left. But if you'll tell us, it may be that we can help you."

"Are you a detective?"

"An amateur detective—my most amusing hobby."

"I've been looking for my uncle. He's disappeared. I'm sure he's here."

THE GAY BRIDE

Final Showing At The Queen's

If a star wishes to reach truly great dramatic heights on the screen, she must be able to laugh at her own personality.

Such is the opinion of Carole Lombard, who has climbed from the obscurity of child roles and ingenues in Western dramas to stellar performances in such pictures as "20th Century" and "Now and Forever."

The sparkle and dazzling power of her personality has brought her to the front ranks of Hollywood actresses, but she still refuses to take herself seriously.

"The minute an actress loses the ability to laugh at the things she does and her own mistakes, a limit is set to her career," declares Miss Lombard, who has one of the most entertaining of her screen portrayals in "The Gay Bride" having its final showings to-day at the Queen's Theatre.

In the confusing pressure of screen work it is easy to become convinced that personal traits and mannerisms are superior to those of characters played. Unconsciously an actress finds herself becoming intent on "making over" each screen role to her own personality. Then instead of being amused at her own mistakes, she gets sarcastic laughs from others.

"When an actress considers herself as a separate person who is very prone to make mistakes and, after all, is not 'written in' the scenario, she immediately gains an advantage. Her performance becomes more effective and flexible

A CUCKOO IN THE NEST

Opening To-day At The King's

The film, "A Cuckoo in the Nest," coming to the King's Theatre to-day was made at the Gaumont-British studios, at Shepherd's Bush, during the past summer, which excelled itself in the provision of a succession of heat waves. Yvonne Arnaud plays the role of Marguerite Hickett, the role she portrayed in the stage version of this uproarious comedy. According to the script, she had to spend the greater part of the time in bed. Since the action of the film takes place in cold weather, heavy coverlets were piled on the bed, which together with the heat from the powerful lights plus the sultry eather, must have tried her endurance to the utmost. With a view to distracting her mind from the discomfort of her position, she worked out little sums converting Fahrenheit into centigrade, because if you're French, and Yvonne was born in Paris, Fahrenheit doesn't mean a thing. Fahrenheit or centigrade, she found the heat just as unendurable anyway.

and she is easily able to adapt herself to new situations. Comedy and tragedy both can be mastered by concentration and effort so they are a definite contrast to the star's true self.

"This was the foundation for the easiest rule I ever learned in acting—when, in doubt, laugh at yourself!"

In 'Voltaire'

At The Alhambra To-day

A new George Arliss picture for Warner Bros., "Voltaire," said to excel even his memorable "Disraeli," in magnificence, interest and dramatic appeal, opens at the Alhambra Theatre to-day.

This is a picture in which Mr. Arliss, recognized as the dean of actors in America, realizes a life long ambition to bring the character of one of the greatest Frenchmen to life on stage or screen.

Not even the life and career of "Disraeli" offers such a rich field for dramatic exploration as did the character and times of Voltaire. Produced with a magnificence never before equalled in an Arliss picture "Voltaire" marks the high water mark of the star's career, out-ranking in importance all previous screen offerings he has made.

The story of "Voltaire" is based on a single dramatic incident in Voltaire's career during the long reign of King Louis XV. of France. Voltaire has been called the father of the French Revolution and the incident upon which the picture is founded was actually one of the contributing causes to the greatest governmental upheaval of the age.

A stellar cast of able players support the star in this picture. Doris Kenyon lends her exquisite beauty to the role of Madame Pompadour. Margaret Lindsay plays Nanette. Theodore Newton, Reginald Owen, Alan Mowbray.

Feminine Chit-Chat

Crying has no effect at all on modern make-up—Darn trouble is that crying has no effect at all on modern husbands.

David Torrence, Doris Lloyd and Ivan Simpson are others featured in the imposing array of talent appearing in "Voltaire." The late John Adolf who directed the last six Arliss productions is responsible for this splendid picture, which is the last work he did before his sudden death in the wilds of the Canadian Rockies last Spring.

"Voltaire" is the most magnificent donation Mr. Arliss has made toward world's entertainment.

George Arliss, whose portrayal of Voltaire hits high, will be seen at the Alhambra Theatre to-day

Reginald Owen and Doris Kenyon, in the roles of the King and France and his mistress, have important parts in George Arliss latest triumph "Voltaire."

"The Love Contract"

Winifred Shottor plays an altogether new role in "The Love Contract." As Antoinette, she has gambled on the Stock Exchange and lost all her money. Forced to sell her home, she accepts the offer of Neville Carrington (Owen Nares), the man responsible for her financial downfall.

Carrington is much interested in a Mrs. Savage (Sunday Wilshin) and when Antoinette is offered the position of chauffeur to the rich man, accepts as much to spite Mrs. Savage as to earn a livelihood. Antoinette is an efficient chauffeur, much more so than Hodge (Gibb McLaughlin), who is a poor specimen.

The capable, ready-witted girl uses Hodge effectively in her schemes to part Carrington and the woman, always bearing in mind the conditions of the contract drawn up between herself and Carrington. The fun lies in the observance of a business contract, while the two are inevitably falling in love.

One particularly amusing part of the story is concerned with a night motor trip to Cornwall. Antoinette is determined that the two shall not spend the night together in the car, and uses Hodge as part of her plan to keep them apart.

The whole of the cast enter into the spirit of the story, with the result that "The Love Contract" is bright and amusing entertainment.

FIGHTING FOR THE PIPERSOfficial Bonnets
In 1928(Special Air Mail Service)
London, January 23.

To those who are accustomed to consider the uniforms of each Guards Regiment as made distinctive even by the position of the tunic buttons, it is interesting to learn that George II, soon after his accession, desired that "all His Regiments should have a fixed clothing."

Until that time uniforms were the concern of the various colonels.

Much curious information on this and kindred subjects is to be found in Sir Frederick Maurice's two-volume "History of the Scots Guards," which appeared recently.

The regiment for instance, has had to fight hard for its pipers. These were not at first attached to the Scots Guards. At the time of the Crimean "Punch's" laughter at their presence on parade led to an official demand for their withdrawal.

Though Queen Victoria, always an ardent Scot, had this reversed, the Adjutant-General returned to the attack in the 'sixties. He too withdrew in face of the regiment's opposition.

Yet the pipers only received their official bonnets in 1928, when they were presented by the King, who is the regiment's Colonel-in-Chief.

Clyde Versus Tyne

The controversy regarding the relative merits of the Clyde and the Tyne as shipbuilding centre was carried a stage further when Mr. R. S. Dalgleish, Lord Mayor of Newcastle, who is a shipbuilder, maintained that National Shipbuilders Security, Ltd., is controlled by Sir James Lithgow, on the Clyde, and that although there may be four representatives on the Board from the North-East coast, there are not as many as there are in Scotland.

"Sir James," he asserted, "calls the tune and all the shipbuilders dance to it. The other day I discussed this matter with Sir James, and he admitted that National Shipbuilders Security had scrapped more yards on the North-East coast than they have on the Clyde."

Sir George Hunter, formerly Chairman, and now a director, of Swan, Hunter and Wigham Richardson, Walsend, in an interview remarked: "I believe that Tyne-built ships contain better workmanship than those built on the Clyde. I hold this belief not merely because I am a Tyne-side shipbuilder, but because shipping superintendents have told me that Tyne-side workmanship is superior to that of the Clyde, and that they have advised their principals to this effect."

Sir James Lithgow is Chairman of National Shipbuilders Security, which was formed to assist the shipbuilding industry by purchasing redundant or obsolete yards and dismantling them.

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, Jan. 23.

The visit to the Saar of Herr von Papen, the German Minister in Vienna, possibly has a deeper significance than the mere recording of his vote in a district where he owns an estate.

For some time past it has been apparent in Vienna that Herr von Papen's special mission of reconciliation had failed.

Viennese Government circles consider is not unlikely that Herr von Papen may be withdrawn, leaving the post of German Minister vacant while Berlin waits on events.

Astute Move

In that event Herr von Papen's reappointment—to succeed Herr Buerkel—as Commissioner for the Saar is spoken of as a sequel. In the early days of a reorganisation of the territory that would be an astute move on the part of Herr Hitler.

Apart from being a Saarlander himself, Herr von Papen is a good Catholic. Herr Buerkel is also a Catholic, but it is not forgotten in the Saar that he took a leading part in the suppression of the Centre (Catholic) party in Germany.

Moreover, the appointment of one who speaks perfect French and is sympathetic to French culture would be reassuring to the small French minority in the Saar territory.

POLICE OFFICER SUMMONED

Sequel To Fatal Accident

There was a sequel to the tragic motor accident in Pottinger Street on December 18 in which a coolie, named Pang Yeung, was killed, at Central Magistracy yesterday when Sub-Inspector D. J. Dredge, of the Hong Kong Police, was summoned for "having allowed Sergeant Effremoff, an unlicensed driver, to drive private car No. 3684."

In admitting the summons, defendant said the only reason for his allowing Sergeant Effremoff to drive, was because he knew he was the holder of a motor licence in Shanghai.

His Worship (Mr. Wynne-Jones) remarked that he had to take a more strict view, because the observance of regulations from persons in his position was expected more than with other people. He imposed a fine of $20.

Other Cases

E. Ainsworth, driver of private car No. 43, was fined $5 for leaving the car unattended in Ice House Street between 10.30 a.m. and 11 a.m. on January 29.

A fine of $25 was imposed on Ng Man, driver of lorry No. 1248, for dangerous driving in Stubbs Road.

Inspector Alexander said the defendant was coming down Stubbs Road about 25 miles an hour, and cutting the bends over the white lines. On one bend, he was completely on the wrong side of the road.

The defendant admitted several previous convictions, and His Worship recommended his licence for suspension.

Yuen Choo, driver of lorry No. 4094, was fined $15 for driving without due care and caution on the Shek-O Road. He was alleged to have been doing from 25 to 28 miles an hour round a bend of the road, which he took on the wrong side.

For failing to stop after knocking down a boy in Johnston Road, and failing to report the accident, Hung San, driver of private car No. 3584, was fined a total of $25. The boy sustained slight injuries to his face, and received treatment at the Government Civil Hospital.

NEW FORM OF HEATING AT HONG KONG HOTEL

Visitors to the Lounge of the Hong Kong Hotel will have felt agreeably surprised at the very pleasant way in which the place is warmed.

Instead of heating the air by means of hot water radiators or ordinary electric fires, the guests in the Lounge are kept warmed by heat rays thrown out by radiant fires without having to breathe a heated and usually stuffy atmosphere.

It is obvious that if a person sits in the sun in the fresh open air one feels warmer than one sitting in the shade although the temperature of the air may be identical in both cases and this is the effect obtained by the radiant fires at the Hong Kong Hotel.

THE SCOTTISH NATIONAL CHURCH

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, Jan. 23.

The Rev. Joseph Moffett, minister of the oldest Scottish church in London, said recently that his Kirk session have decided to change the name, "The Scottish National Church," to that of the Church of Scotland, Crown Court. This decision is a natural sequel to the union of the two Churches in Scotland and the more recent incorporation of the Churches of Scotland in England in the General Assembly in Edinburgh. The church in Crown Court, Covent Garden, has been known as the Scottish National Church since its original congregation worshipped in the Scottish Embassy in Whitehall in 1695. The present building was erected in 1899 to the plans of the late Colonel Eustace Balfour, brother of Earl Balfour, and is on the site of the church that was built in 1771 after the Scottish Embassy ceased to be used as the place of worship for the Scottish community.

$1,000 CLAIM

An Unhappy Family

A claim for $1,000 due on a promissory note was brought by Chan Kwai Hing, the wife of Mr. Wong Kwong Tin, against Wong Yeung Shi before Mr. Justice R. E. Lindell at the Summary Court yesterday.

The defendant was absent through illness and she was represented by her eighth daughter, Wong Tsz Ying. Giving evidence, plaintiff said that the note was written out by Wong Fuk-chan, seventh daughter of defendant who also wrote out the name of her mother for the latter to copy it on the promissory note. The mother was apparently unable to write her own name. Interest was arranged at $5 per thousand dollars per month, but only two months' interest was paid. There was a year's interest due which had been waived.

Cross-examined, witness denied that she had received $100.

Wong Tsz-ying: This is a cheat but I leave it in Your Lordship's hands.

His Lordship: If you say this is a swindle, you must be including your sister, as she is supporting plaintiff's story.

Wong Fuk-chan then gave evidence but said her mother could write her name. She admitted that she wrote the name for her mother to copy, and was rebuked for not telling the Court so when asked if her mother had required any assistance in signing the note.

In giving judgment for plaintiff with costs, his Lordship said the defendant had filed allegations of a swindle which she made no attempt to prove.

There would be judgment for plaintiff with costs and costs of the action in original jurisdiction before the case was brought into the Summary Court.

Wong Tsz-ying: My mother has really been swindled by her own people.

His Lordship: It seems to me that you are a very unhappy family.

POSSESSION OF FORGED NOTE

Prisoner Cautioed

On a charge of being in possession of a forged $10 note of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China, Li Yat Kwong, a 21-year old tailor of No. 32 Caine Road, was cautioned by Mr. Thompson at Central Magistracy yesterday.

The defendant pleaded that the note was handed to him by a person from No. 23 Robinson Road and that he did not know it was a forged one.

Prosecuting, Detective-Sergeant F. W. Fowle stated that defendant was employed at a small tailoring establishment in Caine Road. On December 28, a lady living at 45 Robinson Road had clothes made at the shop and sent her servant with $17 (one $10 note, one $5 note and two silver dollars) to pay for them. The defendant handed the money over to his master, but was repaid $12 from the total for his wages.

On January 10, the lady returned to the shop to have the clothing altered. The defendant told her that the $10 note she had given to the shop through her servant was a forged one, and asked her to take it back. She refused to change it as such a long period had elapsed, and she was not sure whether it was the note or not. On the face of that, the defendant went to the Central Theatre the same night and tendered the note at the box office for a 50-cent seat in the front stalls. The forgery was detected and the defendant was taken into custody and handed over to the police.

The pier will accordingly be closed to all craft.

ARMED ROBBERS FOR TRIAL

Cheungshawan Affair Recalled

Committal proceedings were concluded yesterday against Sung Yung, Ip Yau, Ip Hing, Lok Sau, Chan Shing and Chan Sang all unemployed who were all committed to take their trial at the next Criminal Session by his Worship Mr. E. W. Hamilton at the Kowloon Magistracy.

It will be recalled that the six defendants were charged with armed robbery on January 2 at about 7.15 a.m. at No. 41 Cheung Sha Wan Road, first floor, when Yung Fuk was robbed of two diamond rings a gold and jade bangle, one metal wrist watch, one felt hat and $90 in cash.

The first, second, third, and fifth defendants were alternately charged with receiving stolen property.

At yesterday's hearing final evidence was given by Detective Inspector A. J. W. Doring who was in charge of Police investigations and who also appeared for the prosecution.

Inspector Doring stated that on January 2 at about 11 a.m. in company with a party of police he visited 88 Aplu Street, 2nd floor, where the 4th and 5th defendants were arrested. In the course of a search conducted on the premises, the gold and jade bangle was recovered from the woodwork of a window in the kitchen, part of which had been eaten away by white ants.

More Property recovered

On the same day at about 1 p.m. 13 Cedar Street, 3rd floor, was raided where the first, second and third defendants were found and taken into custody.

On a gesture made by the first defendant Inspector Doring opened a drawer with a duplicate key where the diamond ring was found. Some banknotes were also produced by the same man.

The 3rd defendant also produced 4 $5 notes and when further searched 4 $5 notes were found in different parts of his person. The 2nd defendant was wearing a felt hat which was latter identified by the complainant as his. At the Police Station the 2nd defendant produced 2 $5 notes. At 4 p.m. on the same day the 6th defendant was arrested at No. 1005 Canton Road, first floor. Later on, in the evening, on information volunteered by the 5th defendant a second visit was made to 38 Aplu Street where in the defendant's presence the wrist watch was found. All the raids made by the police were on information obtained.

Defendants Statements

After this evidence was given the defendants were duly cautioned and the charges explained to them.

With the exception of the 4th defendant the rest made statement from the witness box on oath.

In answer to the charge of robbery the first, second and third defendants admitted the charge. 3rd and 6th denied all knowledge or participation and the 4th defendant reserved his defence.

In answer to the charge of stolen property all four defendants denied the charge.

All defendants were committed for trial.

OLD EDINBURGH HOUSE

(Special Air Mail Service)

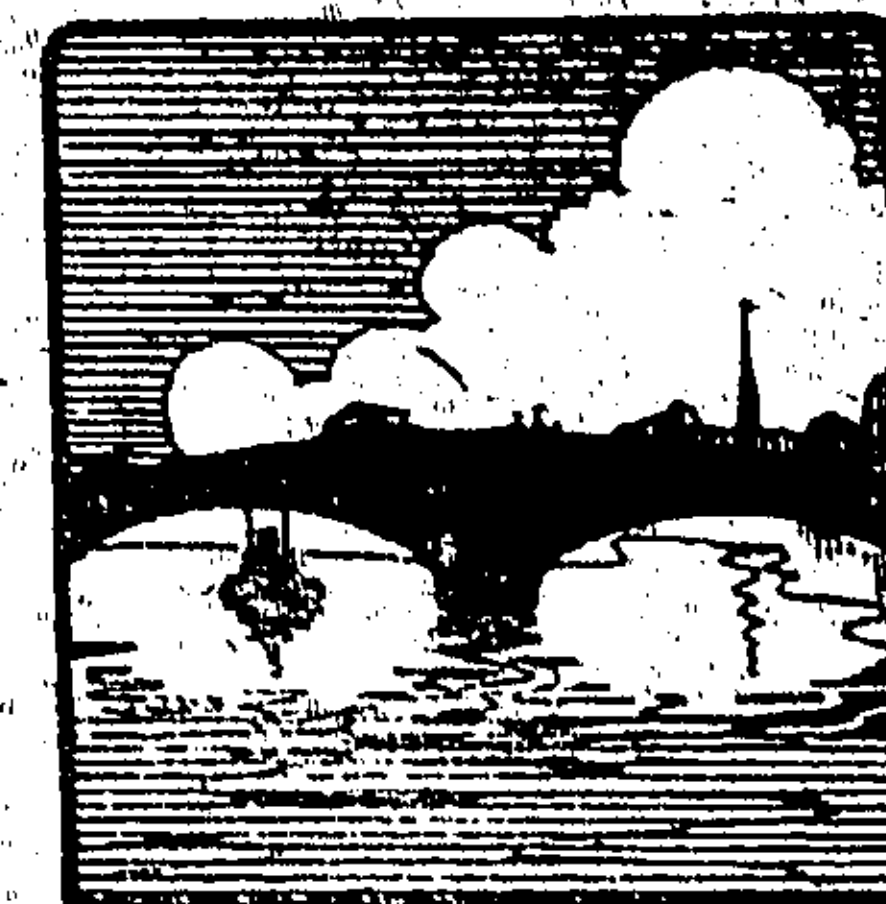

Edinburgh, Jan. 23.

The Corporation of Edinburgh have agreed to purchase Bruntsfield House, parts of which were built in the fifteenth century, and the adjoining estate. It is expected that the cost to the city will be £10,000. The estate covers some nine acres near Warrender Park, and the trustees have accepted the Corporation's undertaking to build tenements only on the frontage to Warrender Park Road and to utilize the remainder of the ground for public municipal purposes. As usual, in any undertaking of the kind in the capital, a definite agreement has been made that the amenity of the district will be preserved. Bruntsfield House was a landmark when James IV. assembled the Scots Army at the Boroughmuir before Flodden.

Getting Their Own Back

In making this purchase Edinburgh Corporation are buying back what they once gave away. In 1714 the estate was given to George Warrander by the magistrates at the end of his term of office as Lord Provost.

Nothing is known here of Mussolini having resigned Italy's claim to organise the Olympic games in 1940 in Rome in favour of Japan, as asserted by a Tokyo message. On the contrary, plans for this event are already being actively prepared. HATS BY TELEVISION

When men repeat, as they are fond enough of doing, that woman's place is in the home, they specify home because among the many agreeable images which the word calls up is this one in particular, that there are no shop windows in the home to tempt the feeble desires of womankind. Pedlars may call at the door; but assiduous propaganda can be done to suggest that stray callers are dangerous characters, out for a little murdering and best left the other side of a well-slatted door. Catalogues will arrive by post—even where a firm, unenterprising plate says "No hawkers, no circulars, no desire for temptation or excitement." After all catalogues are weak intruders, and if they are conveniently mislaid, as often is the case, they are not missed. The news that the Duchess of Kent has already chosen a television hat, which was shown at the first mannequin parade to use this new and ominous invention. She was in Victoria Street, and the hat at the Crystal Palace, but the view was clear enough and the choice was made.

People have often asked what exactly it is they are going to see when television is common, and the first answer seems to be hats. It is small consolation for husbands to reflect that each of those new inventions makes one less reason for ever going out, and that the more invention brings the outside world into the home the less case is there for owning or wanting hats. Women feel differently, and see no incongruity in buying a hat that looks well with a silver teapot and is exclusively for drawing-room wear. Unless life is lived in one room there is always a reason for changing hats in the difference between one room and another, to say nothing of the hour of the day. There seems reason to hope that the same prohibition of advertising that covers the spoken wireless message, will apply also to the picture; but pictures are so much less wearisome and vexatious than voices that there will be many to seek the first glimpses of what Paris has to show to the world. Perhaps it is timely and providential that at this same moment the camera has been brought into use as a more rapid keeper and duplicator of shop accounts than any other. Large stores can now produce fascimiles of the most enormous bills without any clerical or typing effort, and people who have hitherto relied on shops shirking the strain of copying and sending long bills have that protection no longer.

The whole trend of invention is to make debt easier, and there is hardly a science which does not play its part. Salesmen learn in books of psychology which are the weak spots in what they term sales resistance, and such is now their contempt for the public that automatic salesmen have begun to appear in the shops. There is more than ever before ways to buy and easy arrangements for mortgaging future incomes. TROOPS IN SHANGHAI

Better Accommodation Required

London, Feb. 12.

In the House of Commons today, Mr. David Reid requested that immediate steps be taken to ensure that the Inniskilling Pioneers, now quartered in inferior huts in Shanghai, be provided with accommodation equal to the brick and stone structures occupied by the French, Japanese and American troops.

Capt. Hacking replied that the quartering of Units in Shanghai is not a Government arrangement. He had no reason to suppose that the accommodation now provided was below reason for temporary use. He understood that most of the accommodation allotted to the troops in other countries was of a more permanent character and if our troops were not remaining permanently in Shanghai and if the temporary accommodation was good, it might be considered a waste of money to provide brick buildings.

Mr. Reid replied that as the answer contained so many hypotheses, would Capt. Hacking get photographs of the British accommodation. The latter replied that he did not know whether photographs always tell the truth, and anyway, we had had no serious complaints about the accommodation.—

CHINESE EGGS

How They Are Produced

London, Feb. 11.

The sanitary conditions under which Chinese liquid eggs were produced, were the subject of questions and comment in the House of Commons to-day when Sir Percy Hurd, Conservative, asked whether effective inspection was being carried out in England.

Sir Percy requested that full inquiries be made by the British representatives in China as to the conditions of production.

Mr. G. H. Shakespeare, Parliamentary Secretary for the Department of Health, replied that there was no evidence in his hands with regard to the sanitary conditions of production of liquid eggs, nor was any available to his knowledge; but such eggs were subject to examination at ports of entry and were liable to seizure if unfit for human consumption.

The Ministry was unaware of any instances in which disease producing organisms had been found in this commodity, but since the matter had been raised, said Mr. Shakespeare, he proposed to arrange for a special bacteriological examination of some samples of these eggs.

Sir Percy Hurd asked: "Will the Minister inform the House why we receive these vast quantities of Chinese eggs without hygienic precautions which are imposed even upon British producers?"

He was not answered.—

INDIA'S CHANCE TO JOIN "EMPIRE PARTNERSHIP" WITH BRITAIN

Italy To Issue Ultimatum?
The Emperor Seeks Advice

Rome, February 12.
Italian circles say that there were three or four frontier incidents besides the Ualual (Aldub) affair. The Italians did not advance beyond Ualual (Aldub) which they held for the past five years.

It was emphasised that Italy does not consider that mobilization will interfere with the negotiations now proceeding at Addis Ababa, but they must not be caught napping. Massing Abyssinian forces in the frontier makes Italian reinforcements essential to avoid further incidents.

Paris, February 12.
Opinion tends to side with Italy but is unable to see what she can gain by an African campaign when the utmost freedom of action in Europe is so necessary. Anxiety is expressed lest Italy gets caught in the machinery of her own demonstrations. Some urge that London, Paris, Rome and the Entente invoked should find a peaceful solution. Mr. V. McEntee will ask a question in the House of Commons whether the Anglo-Ethiopian boundary commissions report, which accused Italian aircraft officers of threatening behaviour, can be submitted at the next session of the League and whether the Government has made any representations to Italy in that connection.—Reuter.

Rome, Feb. 12.
"Italy may possibly deliver an ultimatum to Abyssinia if the relations between the two countries become more critical than they are already."

The Foreign Office spokesman informed Reuter to-day that it is stated the troops were mobilised purely as a precautionary measure and would not leave Italy unless the situation develops more seriously.—Reuter.

SOUND ADVISE

RESERVISTS MOBILISED

(Special to "Hong Kong Daily Press")
(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received, February 12, 4.30 p.m.)

Rome, Feb. 12.
An appreciable delay between the occurrence of the last Italian-Abyssinian incident and its publication by the Italian press, as well as the time elapsed between the issue of the mobilisation orders and the official confirmation on Monday have given rise to rumours in political circles that Monday's communication also falls short of the full facts. Not only have the reservists, born in the year 1911, but also those between the years 1898 to 1912 inclusive, have been called up, but it is stated, not at full strength.

It is also alleged that all formations of militia have been mobilised and some will embark for the Colonies on Tuesday and Wednesday. Although the whole situation is far from clear, it is thought likely that Italy intends to stage a big demonstration in order to bring pressure to bear on Abyssinia. Such action is not without danger of provoking conflicts on a larger scale than hitherto although in view of the approaching rainy season political circles here do not anticipate the outbreak of hostilities to be of a serious nature before the autumn. Should Italy launch a military expedition against Abyssinia, it is understood that the reservists that have now been called up would then be dispatched overseas.—Transoceanic Run Min.

FRENCH OPINION

(Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press")
(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received, February 12, 4.30 p.m.)

Paris, Feb. 12.
The news of the calling out of two Italian divisions attracted considerable sensation here, papers featuring details relating to the latest incident which interest Paris all the more because only recently a French officer and approximately one hundred natives were massacred by the Abyssinian tribe. Official French quarters, however, maintain reserve and decline to make any comments on Italy's measures, while the news that England might attempt to mediate caused satisfaction.

The newspaper Le Journal nevertheless sees fit to direct a warning to Italy. The paper sees danger ahead for Italy since matters of prestige might drag that country into a danger which is in no proportion to the actual value of things.—Transoceanic Run Min.

ABYSSINIA'S BOAST
"If Italy intends to go to war, Abyssinians will defend their country to the last."
"We have 300,000 men in arms and we can raise a million. We have modern weapons, though we have no tanks or aeroplanes."

This was the declaration of the Abyssinian 'Charge d'Affaires' given to Reuter to-day.
He said he understood there were already 40,000 Italian troops in Eritrea and Italian Somaliland, and thus, Abyssinia was threatened from north and east.

The Italian Government states that negotiations for a settlement of the trouble are proceeding at Addis Ababa.—Reuter.

HALF-HEARTED METHODS DEPLORED

"LONG HISTORY OF RISKS WISELY TAKEN"

The Problem Of The Depressed Classes

London, Feb. 12.

The question of Dominion Status infused special animation at the closing stages of the India Bill debate which was maintained at a high quality of interest up to the last moment. Sir Thomas Inskip replying to several challenges said that Dominion status, as applied to India, meant that both before and after the statute at Westminster which gave the Dominion almost unrestricted powers of legislation, except in matters affecting the Acts by which they were constituted, it gave an equality status, but always within the Empire, as there was no question that India was given the right to secede. All our pledges to India were conditional on her remaining within the Empire.

Mr. Winston Churchill was unexpectedly conciliatory. He and his friends did not intend obstructing for the sake of obstruction. His insistence on provincial autonomy first, which would enable the Central Government to intervene to check any deterioration in the public services, was rooted with a profound sense of the need of safeguarding the interests of the masses. The Bill, which gave power to a small clique was not democracy.

Mr. George Lansbury complained that the bill was prepared without any real consultation with the Indians and urged that the Indians should themselves draw up and submit any measure they should possess like the other Dominions. Her theatrical right to secede, he was convinced, she would never exercise. Mr. Baldwin reminded the critics that loyalty to the Empire was secured by the generous concessions timely made; we are offering India an opportunity of making a considerable step towards full partnership with us in the Empire. Let us not do so in a huckstering spirit but willingly, generously and with confidence.

Following the declaration a vote of mass amendments was handed in by the Labourites and the Indo-Defence league.—Reuter.

SECOND READING OF INDIA BILL

London, Feb. 11.

The Attorney General, Sir Thomas Inskip, during the fourth day of the House of Commons debate on the second reading of the Government of India Bill, dealt in particular with the problem of the depressed classes, the inclusion of law and order within the sphere of action of Ministers, and the question of Dominion status.

The depressed classes and masses of India, he said, had everything to gain by the Bill, and nothing was more likely to quicken the pace of internal reforms for which Britain's great administrations and engineers had paved the way than the fact of bearing a great responsibility. Those who said they would agree to provincial autonomy if law and order were not transferred were clutching at a straw. Divorce between political power, on the one hand and authority in the sphere of public order, on the other hand, would be certain to end in the collapse of one or the other.

INDIA'S POSITION

Referring to Dominion status, Sir Thomas Inskip said the Secretary for India's declaration last Wednesday had not merely the assent of the Government, but expressed their considered judgment. To put that declaration in the Bill, however, would be interpreting an interpretation—more likely to darken counsel than to elucidate the words already used. Sir Samuel Hoare's statement was intended to have precisely the same importance, and to be treated with the same respect, as if Government had been able to put it into the preamble.

It would be extremely difficult to frame suitable language for a formal statement of the preamble. Westminster did not mention, still less define, Dominion status, and did not alter it at all. That India should some time have the same rights as the Dominions, he most certainly affirmed, but it was obvious that India, from her size, condition and strategic position, would have more difficult problems presented to her than were even presented to the Governments of other Dominions.

RISKS WISELY TAKEN

He regretted that the academic question of the right to secede from the Empire had been raised. All the pledges to India were pledges relating to its future development, in the words of the 1919 preamble, "as an integral part of the Empire." It was so stated in Lord Irwin's declaration. It would apply to Lord Irwin's declaration, even if it were not stated, because that declaration was solely put forward as an interpretation of the preamble.

Quite obviously none of the pledges included a promise of status outside the British Empire, nor was the Constitution intended to be used to take India out of the Empire. They were told they were taking great risks in this Bill, but was there ever a time when the British nation was not taking risks? The whole Empire was one long history of risks wisely taken.

The Government felt that this question had been so long pondered and so widely discussed by men of goodwill and of experience, that they might go forward in the hope that their intentions would be accepted for what they were worth, and that India might, after this great debate, realise that the people of Britain were prepared now to lend all their efforts to enable the peoples of India to attain what she had fought them to desire—the full stature of manhood within the British Commonwealth.

SILVER MARKET

(From Our Own Correspondent)
London, Feb. 12.

London silver prices to-day were unchanged as follows:—
Feb. 11 Feb. 12
Spot 24-7/16 24-7/16
Forward 24-9/16 24-9/16
London on New York cross rate at 2 p.m. to-day was 4.8313 compared with 4.8313 at closing yesterday.

A GRAVE NEW FACT

Later speakers included Mr. Winston Churchill, who prefaced his criticism of the Bill by referring to the Dominion status declaration as a grave new fact.
He admitted he himself had loosely and unwisely used the phrase immediately after the war, but later it was felt, in many quarters, in politics, that such a vague and indefinite phrase ought not to play its part in the revision of the Indian Constitution. He claimed they were entitled to a clarification of Sir Thomas Inskip's statement.

The debate is proceeding—British Wireless.

CONSERVATIVES MUSTER

London, Feb. 12.

The Conservative opponents of the Government of India Bill mustered rather larger in number in last night's division of the second reading of the Government of India Bill than was expected. Eighty went to the same lobby, forty-eight Labourites, 3 Independent Labour Party and 2 Independent dents, making 133 against the Government as compared with only seventy-seven Conservatives on the occasion of the second reading of the Select Committee Report on which the Bill is based. In addition to the above-mentioned, eighty conservatives and four others last night paired against the Government. The Government figure 404 included twenty-eight Opposition and Liberals. Lloyd George did not vote.—Reuter.

WORK TO BE DONE

London, Feb. 11.

The Government had not yet considered the question of an election, declared Mr. Stanley Baldwin, Conservative Leader, winding up the India Debate in the House of Commons to-day.
There was much work still to be done and he hoped the House would get on with it, he said, amid cheers from the supporters of the Ministry.

Mr. Baldwin had previously announced that the Government was allocating thirty days to the Committee stage of the India Bill and he added that the announcement of this programme would probably be taken by the "stunt press" as an indication of a General Election at Whitsun.

By a vote of 404 to 133 the House rejected the Labour Opposition amendment to the India Bill, which favoured explicit recognition of India's rights to Dominion status. The Bill was then given its second reading.—Reuter.

Hauptmann Trial

Last Stages Reached

The Hauptmann Trial which has commanded world wide attention for the past few weeks is now drawing to a close and it now remains for counsel to address the Court and the Judge to give his summing up.

One of the features of the case was the calm and stoic way in which Mrs. Lindbergh went through the ordeal of giving evidence of the discovery of the loss of her baby, and during the course of the trial some startling revelations were made. Opinion is divided as to the ultimate outcome of the proceedings but the defendant is optimistic and according to messages received here, he feels that his chances for acquittal "are fine."

New York, Feb. 12.

In his final speech for the defence of Bruno Hauptmann, alleged kidnapper of the Lindbergh baby, Mr. Kelly, chief counsel for the defendant, declared that a gang was responsible for the crime; and had carried the baby away with the aid and connivance of disloyal servants in the Lindbergh home.

The baby had been carried downstairs by someone he knew and trusted, Mr. Kelly argued, and the ladder was "planted" at the window to mislead, he suggested.

There was no impression in the mud below the nursery window to show that a man or baby had fallen from the ladder, Mr. Kelly went on.

ONLY GUESSWORK

The police had bungled in their preliminary investigations because of their theory that Hauptmann had entered the nursery. This theory was based purely upon guesswork on the part of experts.

Oliver Whately, the Lindbergh's former chauffeur, Miss Betty Gow, the young Scottish nurse of the child, and Red Johnson, a friend of one of more of the servants, had guilty knowledge of the kidnapping, the defence counsel charged.

Violet Sharpe, the Lindbergh's maid, had committed suicide because she had given a clue to the police "and the net was closing in."

"SQUARE SHOOTING"

Mr. Kelly alleged that the police had arranged "plants" in order to discredit Hauptmann, prove him guilty and send him to the electric chair.

In conclusion, Mr. Kelly made a dramatic plea for acquittal, declaring:

"I have faith that you all believe in the Golden Rule. The sturdy stock of this country has a reputation for square-shooting, for being men and women who

CRIME PROVED?

Flemington, Feb. 12.

With the commencement of the closing address for the State, the Attorney General, Mr. David Wilentz, who was not expected to speak until to-morrow, demanded a verdict of guilty on the charge of murder.

He declared that the evidence proved that Hauptmann both kidnapped and murdered the Lindbergh baby.—Reuter.

AN "INSIDE JOB"

Flemington, Feb. 12.

Mr. Kelly suggested that the kidnapping was an "inside job" and declared that nobody except Miss Betty Gow knew that the baby would be there on the night of the kidnapping. Pounding the table, Mr. Kelly declared that Red Johnson telephoned Betty Gow on that night only two hours after she had left him. They knew nothing of Red Johnson except that he was Betty Gow's pal.—Reuter.

DEATH SENTENCE REQUEST
Flemington, Feb. 11.
Addressing the Court in the Hauptmann Trial, public prosecutor Wilentz to-day demanded the first death verdict he had ever requested in his career. He added, "If it is a clamour for the life of Hauptmann, it does not come from me or from you but from the evidence."—Reuter.

SPORTS GOSSIP FROM ALL QUARTERS

Mailey Ranks Jardine As World's Best Captain

(By a Correspondent)

London, Jan. 23. Since he gave up bowling those googlies which struck terror in the hearts of many famous batsmen, Arthur Mailey, the former Australian Test player, has been following international cricket from the Press Box.

Mailey witnessed all those matches in Australia which began the fast leg-theory controversy. He has seen all the cricketers worth seeing in recent years.

Now he has picked his world's best team—with D. R. Jardine as captain, and Larwood as the No. 1 fast bowler.

Four Englishmen

This side, world-beaters, in Mailey's opinion, includes four Englishmen, six Australians and a West Indian. It is:

D. R. Jardine (England) (capt.), D. G. Bradman (Australia), Hammond (England), S. J. McCabe (Australia), Leyland (England), Larwood (England), Constantine (West Indies), W. J. O'Reilly (Australia), L. O'Brien, Fleetwood-Smith (Australia) and W. A. Oldfield (Australia).

With Jardine's "choice" as captain few will disagree. I have no wish to enter into any discussion on "body-line" and the like; but one thing is very certain—in his magnificent handling of England's team in Australia, Jardine showed himself to be one of the greatest tacticians of all time.

Why Fleetwood-Smith?

I would go a very long way with Mailey in this world's team, but Fleetwood-Smith would stand little chance were I to be having a hand as an amateur selector.

Fleetwood-Smith looked an improving bowler at the end of the Australians' tour. Yet I never saw in him anything extraordinary.

However, I happen to know that Mailey stands firm in his belief that the left-hand googly specialist will be one of the best bowlers ever. "Just wait," he once said, "Fleetwood-Smith will surprise you all."

Grimmett and Verity

That may be so. On recent form, however, there are infinitely better bowlers than Fleetwood-Smith.

How about Grimmett? At the age of 41, he had a big hand in sending England sliding to defeat. Or, if you want a left-hander, there is Verity of Yorkshire.

No, Mailey can't have Fleetwood-Smith. Your world team must be able to make runs right down the list. And this was Fleetwood-Smith's record in England: 13 innings, 24 runs; 7 (not-out) highest score; 342 average!

Against this Grimmett showed fine resolution in face of a crisis, and as for Verity, well, they say in Yorkshire that one day he'll follow Rhodes and go in first for England.

Women's Cricket Record

Miss Myrtle MacLagan, the first Englishwoman to score a century in women's Test cricket, is a member of an athletic family.

Her two brothers, now in the Army, were cricketers at Haileybury, and she used to practise at the nets with them when her father, Col. R. S. MacLagan, was Bursar there.

Again, her uncle, P. M. G. MacLagan, was a Cambridge Blue, finishing third in the quarter-mile at the 1885 Varsity sports.

Secretary of the Minley Manor Cricket Club, and formerly captain of the Royal School at Bath, Miss MacLagan was included in the England team as a slow bowler. She is a squash racket, and lawn tennis player, and occasionally enters tournaments when not busy with cricket.

Warwickshire?

When Warwickshire meet Wembley Lions in an English Ice Hockey League game at Wembley soon, they will have two Queens and one Streatham player in their team.

Apparently, the Midlands side cannot get together all their players owing to injuries or business ties. So, very accommodatingly, J. Dick and C. Ross (Queens) and F. de Marwitz (Streatham) will turn out for them.

How Soccer Clubs Began

There are some magic names among the sixty-four clubs who will be setting out next Saturday along the way that leads to Wembley and the F.A. Cup Final. Blackburn Rovers, Preston North End, Aston Villa, Arsenal, the "Spurs"—the names trip off the tongue—all of them famous in "Soccer's" story.

Yet looking back to the beginnings of some of these sides, it is curious to note how insignificant they were.

Some schoolboys kicked a ball about; they arranged a few fixtures—and that was the start of such a fine club as Wolverhampton Wanderers.

The Choirboys' Team

Again, when Archdeacon Wilberforce became president of a choirboys' club he could have had no idea that he was becoming the first head of Southampton, of the Second Division.

So it goes on. Bolton Wanderers were first known as Christ Church F.C., members of a Sunday school paying a penny subscription—with an entrance fee of sixpence to buy a ball.

A curate formed the Barnsley club, and Aston Villa owe their origin to a Wesleyan chapel.

Luton's Record

Coming to Stamford Bridge to meet Chelsea in the Cup will be Luton Town, the oldest professional club in the South of England.

In 1890, Luton gave 5s. a week to three local players. This was something new to London.

But Luton went one better next season, paying the whole of their team half a crown a week each, with an extra sixpence for away games.

As for Chelsea, they trace their origin back to the time when a few men met in the saloon bar of a London hostelry and one casually mentioned that Stamford Bridge would be an ideal home for a "Soccer" club.

FILM'S BIGGEST MONEY MAKERS

Janet Gaynor Heads The List

(Special Air-Mail Service.)

London, Jan. 20.

Of all the world's film stars, dashing or glamorous or funny, Janet Gaynor is the biggest money-maker, according to a Hollywood accounting.

Seven of her pictures have each earned more than $200,000. In five of them—"Seventh Heaven" is the best remembered—she was teamed with Charles Farrell. Hollywood's explanation is that Miss Gaynor's more than anybody gives the public what it wants.

Next comes Harold Lloyd, with five films that earned more than $200,000. Charlie Chaplin, the late Rudolph Valentino and Warner Baxter—though Mr. Baxter was not the only star in his successful career—made three $200,000 pictures, and Edmund Lowe has appeared in four. In only two of them, however, was he starred, and in each case he had his partner Victor McLaglen.

"Million Dollar" Successes
Other stars with two pictures that have earned $200,000 or more:

for their producers are Richard Barthelmess, Wallace Beery, Lon Chaney, Ronald Colman, Bebe Daniels, Dolores del Rio, Richard Dix, Marie Dressler, Greta Garbo, John Gilbert, Lillian Gish, Al Jolson, Ruby Keeler, Dick Powell, Will Rogers, Norma Talmadge and Mae West. Four stars—Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Katharine Hepburn, and Constance Bennett—have made one apiece.

The phrase "million dollars" is so freely used in the film industry that one might suppose films that make $200,000 profit for the producers to be as numerous as blackberries. Actually, according to a new statistical survey, there have been only 73 in Hollywood's history. The leaders are:

"The Singing Fool"—$1,000,000.
"The four Horsemen of the Apocalypse"—$900,000.
"Ben Hur"—$800,000.
"The Big Parade"—$700,000.
"The Birth of a Nation"—$600,000.
"Covered Wagon"—$500,000.
"Rummy"—$400,000.
"Broadway Melody"—$370,000.
"The Cock-Eyed World"—$350,000.

INTER-HONG FOOTBALL

Taikoo Wins Annual Match

The annual inter-hong match between Waytoong (Hong Kong & Shanghai Bank), and Taikoo (Butterfield & Swire), was played on the Hong Kong Football Club ground yesterday at 5.00 p.m. and resulted in the triumph of the latter side by five goals to two after being 2-1 in arrears at the interval.

The game was scrappy, but was keenly fought throughout.

In the first half, Turner, playing at right wing for the losers gave his side the lead of two goals, but before the interval arrived Williamson reduced the lead.

After the resumption of play, Crowie scored two for the winners, with Hutchinson and Williamson adding to the score.

"The Gold Rush," "The Kid,"

"The Ten Commandments"—$500,000.

Of the 73 pictures, 27 were highly dramatic, 27 romantic, 13 funny, and seven comedy-dramas. Twenty-nine were adaptations of popular plays or novels, 13 came from literary classics, and the rest were originals or adapted from short stories. More than half the 73—37 to be exact—were silent.

Analysing the 73 further, one finds that 22 presented huge spectacles (including 11 musical, 10 war stories, four Westerns, and three Biblical subjects), that "Passion" is the only European picture that ever earned a million dollars in America, and nine out of ten had a happy ending.

PERRY'S LOSS OF FORM

Crawford Superb In Australian Final

Nothing has caused more comment in lawn tennis circles than the decline of Fred Perry in Australia, where his defeat by Crawford in the final of the Australian singles championship was his eighth reverse during the tour. Perry's loss of form is simply explained. He has been under the strain of competitive tennis, winter and summer, since early in 1930, in four of five continents.

Here is the record:

1930.—Hard court and French championships; Wimbledon; U.S. championships, followed by a long winter tour of the Argentine, Brazil, Chile and Uruguay.

1931.—Long Davis Cup campaign ending in the challenge round; hard court and French championships; Wimbledon; America again; winter tours in Scandinavia, Germany and the West Indies.

1932.—Davis Cup again—the year we crashed to the Germans in Berlin; hard court and French championships; America for the third time; home for a fortnight; and then off to South Africa for the winter.

1933.—Right through the Davis Cup competitions (we won the trophy); hard court and French championships; Wimbledon; fourth American visit—and his first major title; new ground in a long tour in Australia and New Zealand. Won Australian championship.

1934.—French and hard court championships, Wimbledon (which he won); Davis Cup (retained); fifth "America" and the title again; present tour in Australia.

No wonder Perry is stale and as his team mate, G. P. Hughes, has said, "fed up."

CRAWFORD'S VICTORY

Superb Tennis In Melbourne Final

Jack Crawford, defeated Fred Perry (the holder) in the final of the Australian lawn tennis championships at Melbourne by 2-6, 6-4, 6-4, 6-4.

Playing "superb tennis" which made him the master of the situation at all times after the first set, Crawford gained ample revenge over Perry for the latter's victory over him in the same tourney last year.

The masterful fashion in which Crawford polished off the sterling English player served notice upon the tennis world that before any rankings for 1935 are made the status of the brilliant player from "down under" will have to be considered.

Crawford never looked better. His service had plenty of speed and pace, his ground strokes were hit with a crispness which was lacking in his play last year, and they carried both burning speed and deadly direction, often flicking the tape as the Australian passed Perry, who stormed the net in a gallant but futile attempt to turn the tide of the contest.

Perry on the Defensive

Crawford's overhead play was also of high order and he had his opponent constantly on the defensive by converting Perry's loss into smashes which made the Englishman scramble in order to return them at all. And at such times as Crawford left the baseline to take an aggressive forecourt position he was in complete charge.

Only in the first set, when he broke through Crawford's service twice to win rather handsily by a score of 6-2, did Perry seriously threaten. Some of the gallery, not realising that Crawford is a notoriously slow starter felt that when Perry won the opening set he would proceed to breeze right through Australia's ranking player for an easy victory.

Best Since Brookes and Wilding

However, after Crawford had worked himself into playing form he proceeded to give one of the finest exhibitions of tennis that has been seen in Australia since the days when Brookes and Wilding were at the top of their game. If the standard of the easy-going nonchalant Australian's play in this match can be taken as a criterion of the form he will show in Europe and America during the coming months, more than a few will risk their shakels on the chances of the Davis Cup going back to Australia.

SILK INDUSTRY IN SHANTUNG

Capital Available For Development

[Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright).]

Tainan, Feb. 3.

Two years ago, Canton had an exhibition of silk piece goods in commemoration of Empress Lu Chu, who is credited by tradition with the discovery of the use of silk for apparel over 4,000 years ago. More substantial help, however, to the industry will come from the Government's experiments to improve the quality of silk and to stimulate the trade by small loans to merchants and cultivators.

In regard to the promotion of the silk industry in Shantung province, Mr. Chang Hung Lieh, Provincial Commissioner of Reconstruction, who recently returned from a trip to Nanking and Shanghai, stated that the Shanghai Commercial and Savings Bank has decided to invest $100,000 to push forward the industry.

This, it is expected, will aid the industry appreciably and increase employment. The improvement in the quality of silk will require another loan to be expended research on sericulture and weaving methods and spreading knowledge thus gained among the silk producers and labourers.

Mr. Chang also stated that the General Manager of the Hui Hsin Silk Institute in Wush has promised to remit $30,000 for purchase of improved silkworm eggs for the province. The Commission of Reconstruction is, needless to say, undertaking a gigantic task, but it is assured of hearty support from the people interested in the revival of the silk industry, not only in Shantung but in the whole of China.

Mr. Chang also intimated that the Salt Administration will summon a meeting of the delegates of salt organs in Hopel, Shantung and Honan at the end of this month to allot the salt surplus for the promotion of education and other reconstruction work in the three provinces.

MEDICAL EDUCATION IN SCOTLAND

$100,000 Bequest To University

(Special Air Mail Service)

Edinburgh, Jan. 23.

A bequest of over £100,000 to Edinburgh University was disclosed in the Court of Session, Edinburgh, on a petition asking for the approval of the Court of a scheme dealing with a bequest under the will of the late Mrs. Annie Mina Cameron, widow of Lieutenant-Colonel Lewis Cameron, of the Indian Medical Service.

Mrs. Cameron, who lived at St. Heller, Jersey, died, in October, 1930, and by her will bequeathed all her estate and effects to the University of Edinburgh and directed that a fund to be known as the Lewis Cameron Fund should be utilized in establishing a yearly prize for the best paper on bacteriology or on the diagnosis of disease by students of the University. The free residuary estate amounted to £103,771. The secretary of Edinburgh University had pointed out that that amount was quite out of proportion to the purpose of the bequest. Certain proceedings were instituted by Mrs. Cameron's executor before the High Court in England, and in these proceedings the University of Edinburgh gave an undertaking that they would make a proper application to the Court of Session for a scheme for the regulation of the charitable purposes affecting the residuary estate.

A report was presented to the Court of Session by Mr. H. G. Guthrie, advocate, setting forth the proposed administration of the fund. It was proposed to set aside the following sums:—£3,000 to provide two yearly prizes of £50 each, one open to undergraduates and the other to post-graduate students, for the best papers on bacteriology or diagnosis of disease; £15,000 for establishing and endowing a Lewis Cameron teaching fellowship in bacteriology; £15,000 to endow one of the existing lectureships in bacteriology; £10,000 to form a Lewis Cameron research fund; £10,000 for a Lewis Cameron library fund to provide books relating to bacteriology and diagnosis of disease. The whole remainder was to be set aside as the nucleus of a fund to be known as the Lewis Cameron Medical Buildings Extension Fund for providing additional accommodation and equipment in Edinburgh University for teaching the sciences bearing on the diagnosis of disease. The sum required for the buildings is £50,000. The University desires to maintain its reputation as a centre of medical education and research.

Mr. R. Candlish Henderson, K.C., for the petitioners, asked their Lordships to approve the scheme, and the Court granted his motion.

GERMAN FOREIGN MISSIONS

Workers Facing Destitution

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, Jan. 23.

Because of the refusal of the German Government to allow money to go out of the country some German foreign missionaries are on the verge of destitution, Dr. J. H. Oldham, secretary of the International Missionary Council, said in a speech at a special meeting of the Missionary Council of the Church Assembly at Church House, Westminster.

German missions abroad, he said, were "facing catastrophe." This was not due to a falling off of subscriptions. Until a few months ago these had kept up remarkably in view of the difficulties in Germany. The difficulties were due to the restrictions on exchange. Money was available for imports into Germany, but for other purposes the Government refused to let money out. The total amount of money raised by all the contributors to the German missions had been £230,000 a year.

The salaries of officials overseas had been cut by 50 per cent. The situation had grown worse. Since July there had been a considerable restriction of the contributions of money sent to the mission field. In November, only £700 had been sent out for all purposes and, so far as they know, nothing had gone out during December.

Tremendous Hardship

Tremendous hardship and distress must be caused by this sudden cutting off of supplies. German missionaries in some places were in a state of destitution. It had become clear that it was impossible there should be any continuance of collective support for German missions from outside. On the other hand, they recognised that they were facing an emergency, and therefore, the suggestion was made that missionary societies might contribute towards an emergency fund to mitigate the immediate hardship and to allow a certain amount of time for the reorganisation inevitable when any change took place. German missions were facing catastrophe. The proposal was that help should be given in the form of loans to the German societies. They would much prefer to collect money themselves and to deposit an equivalent in a bank in Germany. They did not wish their people to get out of the habit of giving to missions.

EXPERT RIFLE WOMAN

Scores 396 Out Of 400

Moscow.

On the first day of the correspondence shooting contest between the Bauman club of Moscow and the Portsmouth Rifle Club (U.S.A.), the women's team of the Bauman club scored 2,308 points out of a possible 2,400.

The first place went to Senturina, who, in the first series of shots, scored 98 out of a possible 100, 98 out of a possible 100 in the second series, and 100 points each in the third and fourth series, scoring a total of 396 points out of a possible 400.

Mr. Faymonville, the United States Military Attaché to the U.S.S.R., who attended the shooting, in an interview with press representatives, stressed the great importance of such correspondence contests between two rifle clubs, which testifies to the consolidation of relations between the two countries. "I believe," he added, "that I am attending the establishment of new marksmanship record for women. I have no doubt that this competition will be the beginning of a whole series of correspondence matches between American and Soviet sharpshooters."

NEW POSTAL SERVICE

Custody Of Official Documents

[Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright).]

Nanking, Feb. 4.

"Custody of documentary letters," a new branch of postal service, will be organized by the Ministry of Communications shortly.

According to the proposed plan of this new service, the post office will serve as the custodian of any official or documentary letters. Letters for custody are to be written in triplicate. Both copies will be carefully checked by the post office. The duplicated copy will be sealed by the post office and kept in custody for a designated period, at the expiration of which it will be destroyed. The original copy will be sealed by the sender, in the presence of an official of the post office, and mailed by registered post. The fees are proposed to be calculated on the basis of the number of words contained in the letter.

The purpose of this service is to avoid legal complications, especially in commercial transactions. For, according to the Civil Code, the right to claim payment for commodities sold is forfeited if the claim is not made within two years of the sale. Complications have often arisen when the letters, making the claim within the prescribed period are destroyed by the debtor. In cases like this, the creditor generally has an arduous task to prove that he had made the claim within the legal period. The intention of the proposed new service is to solve this problem once and for all.

BETTER TRADE PROSPECTS

All-Round Signs Of Recovery

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, Jan. 23. Prospects for British trade during the coming year are, on the whole, brighter than they have been for some time. Many of the leading industries report a much more favourable outlook, and there are at last real signs of the long years of depression beginning to come to an end, although, of course, there is still a long way to go before "boom" years arrive once more.

During this year there has been definite progress in many of the national fields, and throughout the Empire and in foreign countries as well. There has been a definite recovery in industrial production, a great and steady decline in unemployment, a strengthening of the prices of raw materials, and, in general, evidence that equilibrium is once more being established.

It can be said that this country has now definitely turned the corner, and there are signs that the rate of advancement in trade may be speeded up. Already, during the past two years, the index of productive activity in British industry has considerably advanced, and even reached the level which ruled in the relatively prosperous years of 1929-30.

Bigger trade fair. An indication of the improved outlook is afforded by the 1935 British Industries Fair, which opens in London on February 18, and at Castle Bromwich, Birmingham, on May 23. There will be nearly a million square feet of space for stands, an increase of some 25 per cent. on last year's exhibition space, and eleven times more than at the first Fair in 1915. There will be more than 2,500 exhibitors, and buyers are expected from more than seventy countries, which will be easily a record.

The index of production for textiles was 94 for the first half of 1934, as against 90 in 1933. For chemicals it was 109, as against 101; for iron and steel 104, as against 82; and for non-ferrous metals 130, as against 102.

In the twelve months to the end of September employment had risen by 362,000 to 10,233,000 and is now higher than at any time since September, 1929. The improvement covers practically every kind of trade. In the coal mining trade at the end of September unemployment was down by 83,669; in the iron and steel trade by 18,385; in shipbuilding by 24,377; and in general engineering by 46,888.

In some industries the improvement has been almost spectacular, and in spite of a possible winter curtailment of trade in certain industries such as building, there is no reason to think that trade in these industries will permanently diminish again.

Iron and steel showed a 26 per

SMALL TURNOVER

[Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright).] Berlin, Feb. 11.

The turnover of the sharemarket on Monday was again small but the general tendency remained fairly firm. The fixed interest securities market was very dull, the downward movement of the city loans continuing while a number of gold and mortgage bonds was also a shade weaker. SHANGHAI MARKET COMMENT

Shanghai, Feb. 6.

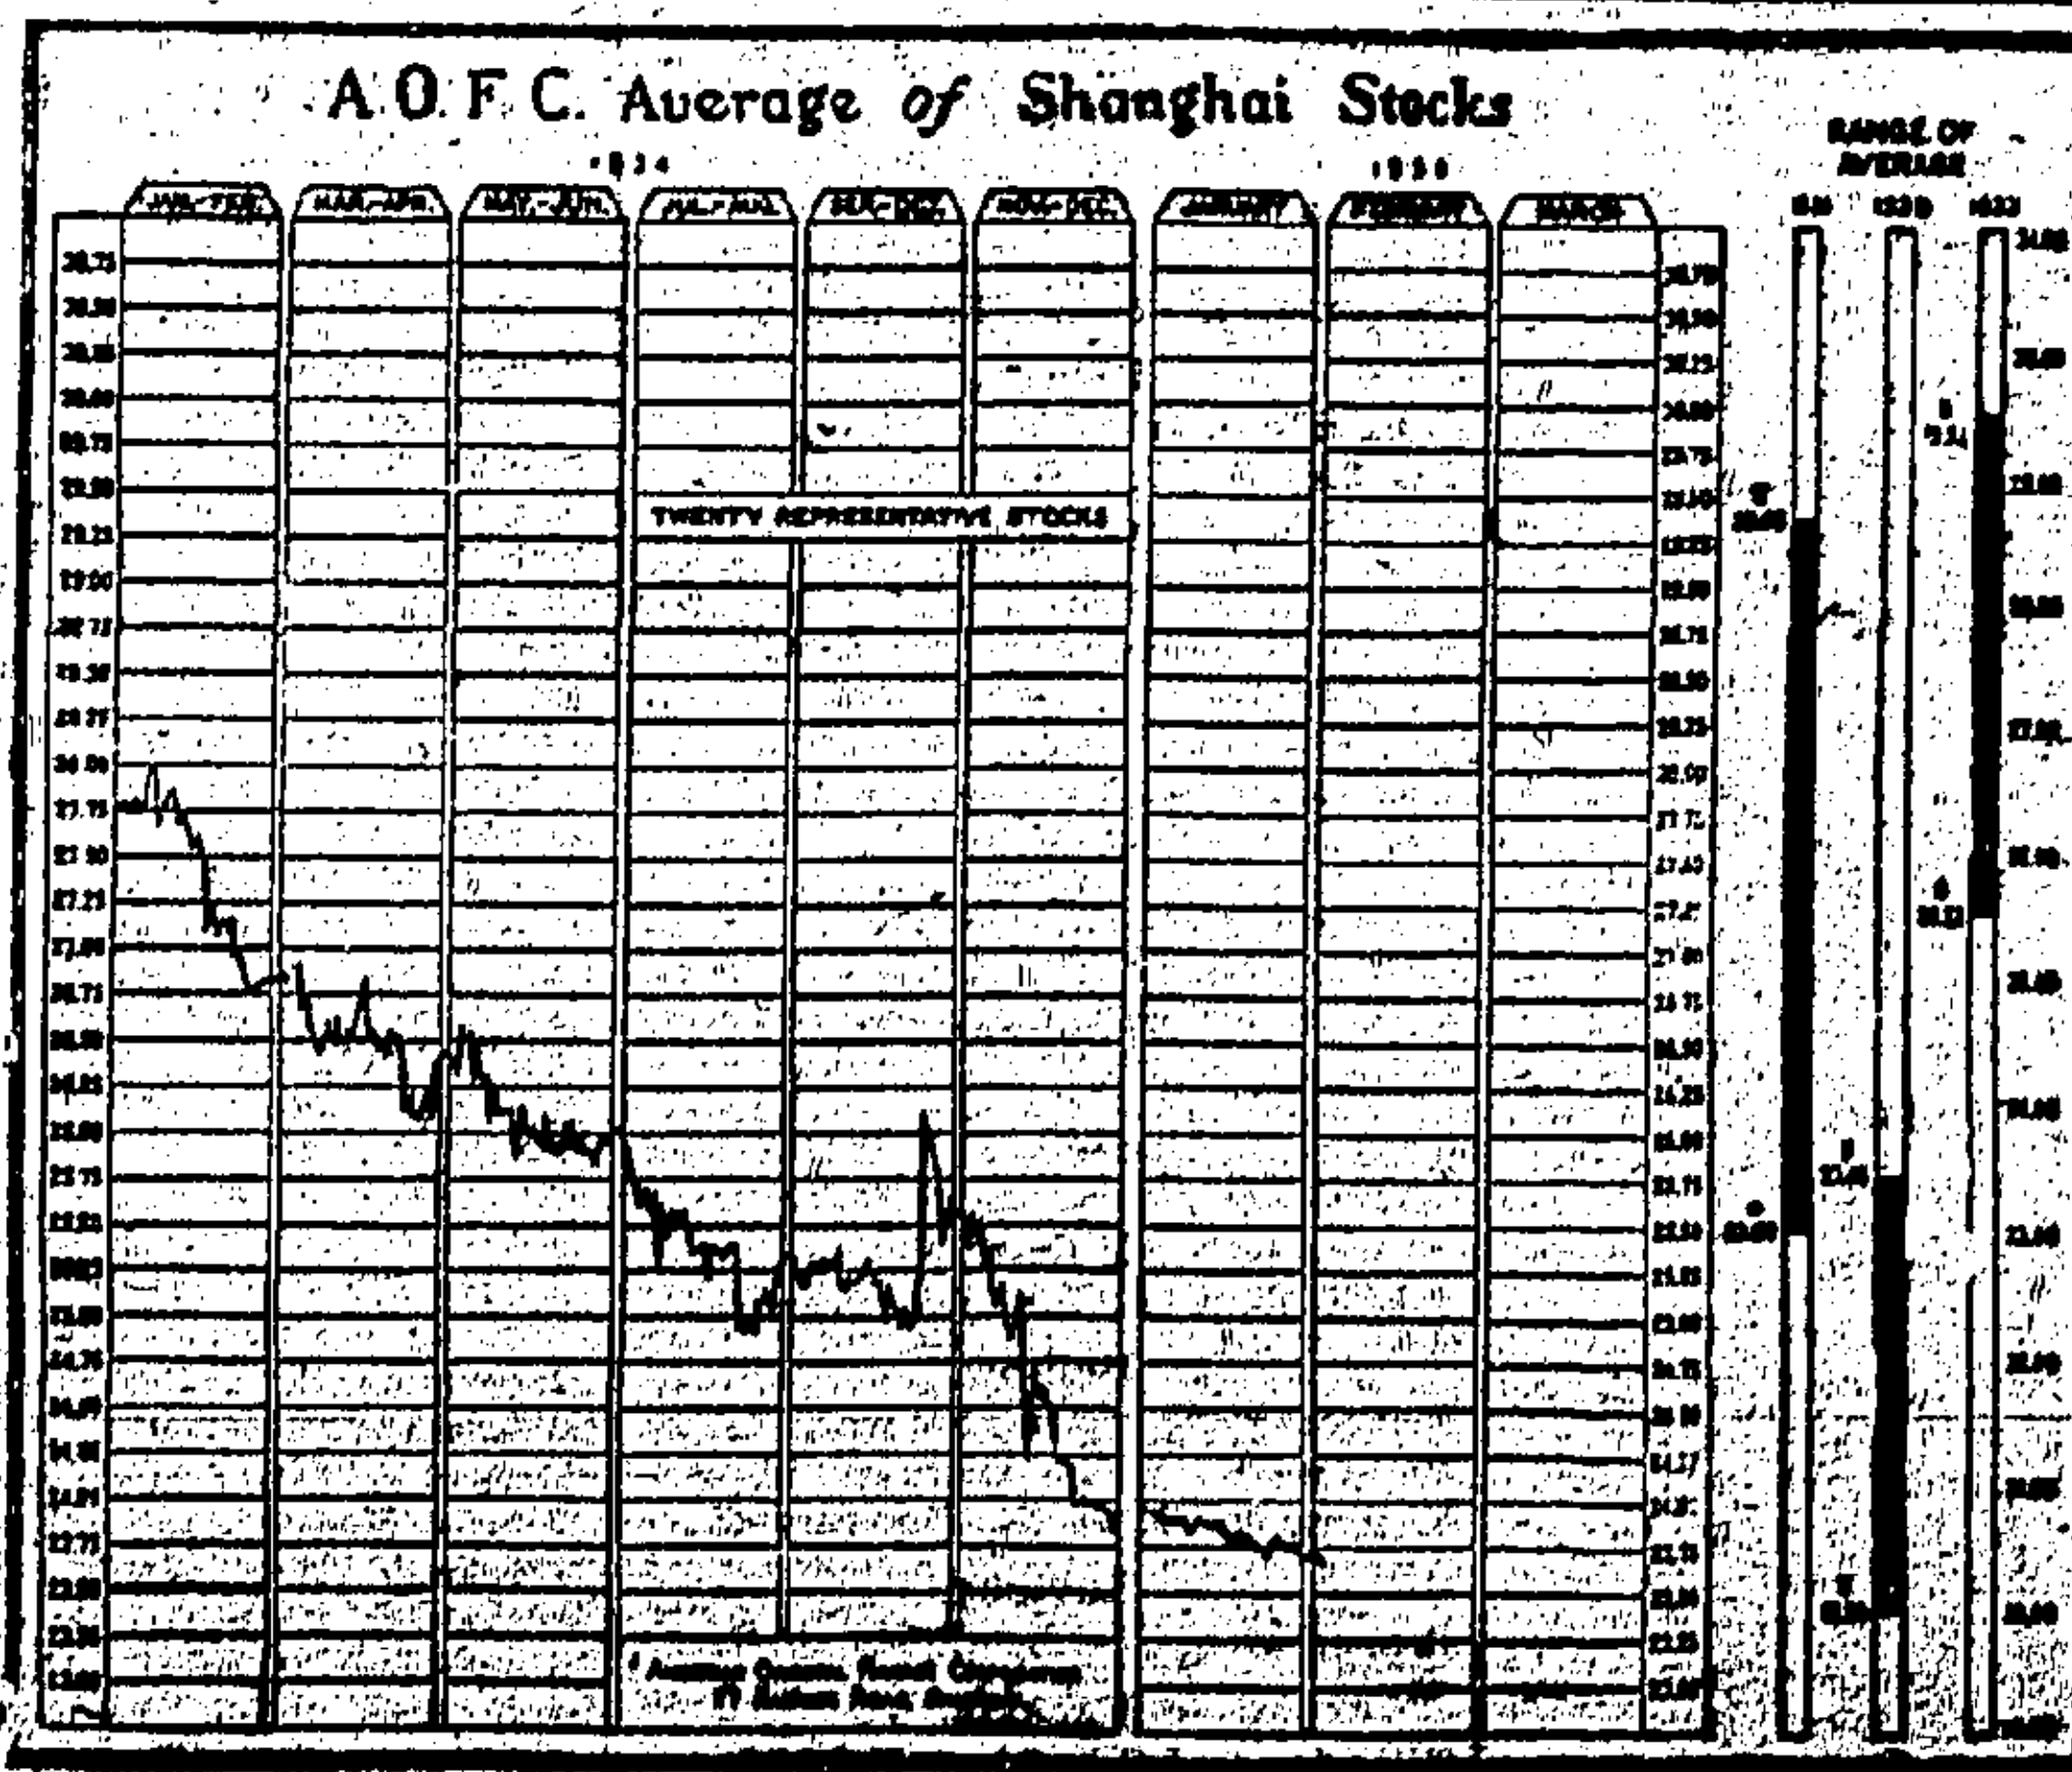

Tuesday being Settlement Day on the Shanghai Stock Exchange, no auctions were held, and a small debenture transaction was the only business done. Wednesday's half-day session was dull. All primary markets for raw rubber were easier, the weakness in rubber was rumoured to have been brought about by the failure of a large firm on the London Baltic Exchange interested in Indian business. The turnover in the general market was small; Shanghai Power 5 per cent. preferred at 132, representing a drop of 14 pts. from the last business recorded.

Shanghai Lands at 22, a drop of half a point, and China Realty at 10.60 were the main features. Debentures continued to remain on the easy side with the exception of Shanghai Waterworks six per cent, 1932, buyers offering to buy at 101, but none were available at this rate. The market continued to display a lack of interest among traders, and business activity was again at a low ebb. Trans "B" Hong Kong and Shanghai Power 54 preferred were the main items changing hands. While the London, New York and Singapore raw rubber markets showed higher prices, there was very little business done in local rubber shares. Somewhat more business was done in the debenture market, the leading issues being Shanghai Power 54 per cent and S.M.C. 5 per cent 1934.

The Chinese Government Bond Market steadied on Tuesday and advanced by various fractions. Business was comparatively quiet due to the approaching China New Year settlement, business was extremely quiet on Wednesday and a turnover of only about three millions was recorded. As was to be expected under such conditions fluctuations were very mild and varied over a narrow range.
